FRENCH ARMY FIGHTING

Russian Forces Being Concentrated
Along the Rumanian Border to Prepare for Effort to Save Serbia.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, Nov. 27.—The Serbian
forces soon will become an army without a country unless the French
should defeat the Bulgarians, four divisions of whom are said to be hammering at the French lines. Reports arrive at various sources that Monastir has been surrounded by Bulgarians
and that they may not wait for their Austro-German allies before entering the Macedonian capital.

The main Serbian army, retreating in a southerly direction before the field Marshal Von Mackensen's troops, may find no rest even in Greek territory, as it is reported here
that the invaders of Greece would not hesitate to cross into Greece. Apparently the German leaders expect the Serbians and their allies will wait attacking Greece. It is said these operations will be under the supreme command of Field Marshal von Mackensen.

Additional reports from the battle
at Ctesipon, in Mesopotamia, near Bagdad, indicates that the British forces won a substantial success instead of suffering a reverse as first accounts led the nation to believe.

Central Powers Active.
The diplomatic representatives at Athens of the entente powers are still active in their latest effort to settle definitely all outstanding questions
being the present in the Premier Skoufoulidis of a note detailing the security and freedom of action of the allied troops.

On Rumanian Frontier.
The situation along the Rumanian
frontier, where a great Russian force is said to have been gathered, is still obscure. The display by the Rumanian public of feeling in favor of Russia is regarded in London as an indication that the nation is in a position to disregard the demands of the central powers.

No definite news has been received of the renewed Austro-German offensive in Galicia. It is expected, however,
that this movement will be pushed energetically for the political effect
on Rumania.

Report Advances.
Berlin, Nov. 27.—German troops
advancing in Serbia have occupied the heights on the left bank of the Sava river, west of Christiana. German army headquarters announced today. The Austrians are advancing southwest of Mitrovitz. The capture of 2,500 more Serbians is recorded.

On Russian Lines.
"Reports from Vienna that the Russian announcement of the capture of Chortorysk is untrue," says the Overseas News agency. "Chortorysk has been handed to the ground. Russian patrols which were sent to cross the Sava river were repulsed and there are no Russian forces on the east bank."

Recapture Town.
London, Nov. 27.—The Serbians
have recaptured Krasovo, in southern Serbia, about twenty miles west of Priepel, according to a dispatch to the Star from Athens.

Allies Land More Troops.
London, Nov. 27.—Allied troops continuing to land at Saloniki in large numbers. A Russian dispatch filed yesterday at Saloniki says that important British reinforcements reached that port on Thursday and were landed immediately.

Official announcement of Christina by the Austrians and Germans, the message says, the main body of Serbians retreated in a southerly direction. The Serbians were unable to maintain their position in the Katchanik region owing to the greatly superior forces of invaders.

Official announcement has been made to commanders of the allied troops at Saloniki of the guarantee made by the Greek government relative to freedom of action of their army. Winter has set in earlier than usual in the Balkans. It is expected military operations on both sides will be greatly hampered thereby.

Many Prisoners.
Berlin, Nov. 27.—The number of Serbian prisoners taken up to the present time by the German-Austro-Hungarian and Bulgarian troops, says
the Overseas News agency, "is 101,000
officers and men. The invading forces also rescued 2,000 Austro-Hungarian prisoners who have been taken prisoners by the Serbians, but later abandoned during the hasty retreat of King Peter's forces."

cisco, has been appointed private

conditions in the United States and is one of the best English scholars in Japan. The post of secretary to the minister is one of the most important
at the foreign office.

AIRMEN BATTLE AMONG THE CLOUDS

Nothing is so dramatic as a battle between airmen among the clouds.
The picture graphically portrays the action between a German aeroplane
and a French airship.GERMANS UP TO NEW TRICKS
AS REPORTS FROM FRONT
CONTINUALLY INDICATE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, Nov. 27.—German air strategy has changed since last May, when
for a period of some months, few German aeroplanes appeared near
the allied line on the Western front.
But the latest reports from St. John show that more than 200 air battles
have been fought recently with French aviators by whom sixteen German aeroplanes were brought down. These included several new types, besides the familiar Taube.
The new types the Germans have been experimenting with are modeled on the batplane idea. One of these was a big heavily armed biplane with two bodies and two or three engines.
But it did not seem to be entirely successful, as it was rather slow and unwieldy. Next to appear was a very similar biplane of the ordinary tractor type with single but very powerful engines. The two used to chase up and down the German lines

at terrific speed and with an unusual amount of noise, apparently to frighten away British airmen. Apparently they impressed the Germans as useful as more of the same type made their appearance. Machine guns were mounted on the wings and the fire and the range of the first limited by the propeller and the after gun having a clear field in an upward direction, gave them a certain advantage. Several of these were brought down by both British and French, but their numbers have nevertheless continued to increase of late. They keep largely to their own lines which seem to be the German plan of air strategy.
The German plan is obviously to destroy the greatest number of enemy
aeroplanes with a minimum loss to themselves. They do this by enticing the foe over their own lines.
It is an immense advantage to fight an adversary over one's own lines, as the airman not only has the support of high angle guns below, but can land within his own territory in case of injury to himself or his machine.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Baltimore, Nov. 27.—One person is dead and four are missing of the eighty-eight people known to have been on board the steamer Tivoli,
which was burned last night on Chesapeake Bay, near Annapolis. Mrs.
Eva Bowden, a passenger, who was ill, died on a life raft shortly after leaving the steamer. The missing are two children, Captain Howard, commander of the Tivoli, and two of the crew. It is thought they may have been taken aboard a tug which aided in rescue work.
The rest of the passengers and crew
were taken off by vessels which had been attracted by the blaze. Seventy-one of the number were carried to Norfolk and Newport News by other steamers. The cause of the fire cannot be learned.

portedly boarded and searched by an officer and man from a British cruiser at Progresso, Mexico, arrived here
today and reported being pursued

the New Jersey coast.

THINK PEACE PLEAS

Women Who Called on President Wilson Believe He Was Impressed
by Their Arguments.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Nov. 27.—Prominent women peace advocates who are behind a movement for conference of neutral nations to be called in an effort to end the European war, expressed themselves as optimistic today over their plan. A delegation representing the movement saw President Wilson yesterday in an effort to induce him to give it his support. But the president was non-committal. One of the women said afterward, however, that she believed the president was deeply impressed with the information she was giving him, adding,
"I think you will hear something from the White House before very long."

Ford's Attitude.
Baltimore, Nov. 27.—Henry Ford,
the Detroit manufacturer, called upon Cardinal Gibbons today to pay his respects and outline his plans for his proposed peace commission to Europe.

The Cardinal devoutly echoed Mr.
Ford's hopes for a successful conclusion of the project by Christmas, but he was adverse to giving his formal approval. He said he felt there were too many formidable difficulties in the way to hope for its successful culmination. Mr. Ford asked Cardinal Gibbons to suggest names of prominent persons who are interested or he thought could be interested, but
the cardinal said he preferred to leave that to Mr. Ford's own judgment.

Upon leaving the cardinal, Mr.
Ford said that he was going to Philadelphia where he had a dinner engagement with John Wanamaker.

Bordeaux, France, Nov. 27.—An inquiry has been begun by the government to ascertain the cause of fire
aboard the British steamer Barkdale,
which arrived here yesterday from New York with a cargo of horses and cotton. The Barkdale was several days out when smoke was observed emerging from No. 4 hold. The hatches were closed and the fire made little progress during the remainder of the voyage. On arrival here the hold was opened and flooded. Only 100 bales of cotton were destroyed.

Recapture Ctesipon in Mesopotamia
After Temporary Retirement Before Turk Attack.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, Nov. 27.—The battle between British and Turkish forces at Ctesipon, which for a time looked like a decisive British defeat, is now reported to have been a success of first importance. Information received today that the retirement of the British after the capture of Ctesipon, occasioned by the lack of ammunition, was only temporary. After Turks withdrew in the direction of Bagdad the British reoccupied the former position, encountering no opposition as they took possession of Ctesipon
for the second time.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Joliet, Nov. 27.—State's Attorney
Robert Martin concluded the final argument of the prosecution in the trial of Joseph Campbell, negro convict convicted of murdering Mrs. Mazie
Odette Allen, wife of former Warden Allen, of the Joliet penitentiary, today. The jury today heard the prosecution's case, which was founded on falsehood and the defendant had repeatedly lied on the witness stand. He ridiculed the testimony of Mrs. Allen, who was the result of an accident, and denied the death penalty for the accused man.
The case went to the jury late this afternoon.

and her two sons, Edward and George Hackman, aged twenty and eight, respectively won their fight against the estate of George Townsend, railroad builder, in a decision handed down in the circuit court here today. The court held that the pre-nuptial agreement entered into between Townsend

previous marriage, and to settle

PRESIDENT ATTENDS
ARMY-NAVY CONTEST

Wilson and Party Leave Washington
Early Today to Be on Hand for Annual Gridiron Struggle.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Nov. 27.—President
Wilson and party left early today for
New York to witness the Army and Navy football game. The party occupied two private cars attached to a regular train.

Accompanying the president were Mrs. Norman Galt, President Wilson's niece; Mrs. Wm. H. Bolling, Mrs.
Galt's mother; Miss Bertha Bolling,
Mrs. Galt's sister; Secretary of War McAdoo, Mrs. N. Howe, the president's sister; Mrs. N. Cotheran, a daughter of Mrs. Howe, and her daughter, Miss Josephine Cotheran; Secretary Tamm
and Dr. Grayson, the white House physician.

At the game the president will sit
first in a box on the navy side of the field, and on the army side during the second half.

The president will spend tonight and probably tomorrow night with his friend Colonel E. M. House. He will return to Washington Monday morning.

New York, Nov. 27.—Men who govern and guard the nation are here in thousands to see the annual football game played by West Point and Annapolis. Streets and hotels are gay with the gold and gray of the army
and the blue and gold of the navy.
Admirals and generals, cabinet members, senators and representatives are as much in evidence as policemen. It is estimated that 25,000 persons came from outside the city to see the contest. Betting favored the army on its records. Early comers waited expectant for arrival of President Wilson and his fiancée, Mrs. Norman Galt, who left Washington this morning.

Considerable portion of the president's cabinet, including Secretary Daniels of the navy and Secretary Garrison of the war department, are here.

Quiet crowds gathered at the depot despite the stormy weather. The president busied himself in caring for the ladies in his party, personally attending to the several automobiles
which were well protected
from the rain during the long drive.
A special police squad of twenty mounted men was at hand to escort
the president and they preceded the car
at a smart trot on the ride to the football field.

The president and his party arrived at the field at 1:40 p. m. A drizzling rain threatened to stop or turn into a heavy rain, was falling. After the navy team came on the field, supported by their mascot, the navy goat.
A moment later the army eleven also came on the field. Both squads were given a terrific welcome by their adherents.

Little time was lost in preliminaries.
Both Captain Weyand and Captain Miles were brought together by referees to choose the goal and kick off. The army won and chose to defend the west goal.

The army kicked off at 2:13 to the navy's thirty yard line. The navy
shipman was downed without gain.
Martin on the first rush carried the ball on his forty yard line for a first down and on the next play made nine yards through West Point's left sac-kle. Craig punted to the army's twenty yard line, where Coffin was downed without gain. A line buck by Olin carried the ball back to the navy's ten yard line, where the ball was bumped by the navy. It was recovered by Yeyand of the army, close to the thirty yard line. Ford of the army, failed to gain through the navy
line, and Coffin also failed to make any impression on the midshipmen's defense. It was a wonderful defense of the part of the navy close to their goal line.

With one more try the ball was extruded to Olinphant and he made good by smashing through the navy
line for a touchdown. Olinphant kicked the goal, making the score
seven to nothing, and the army
sang their "Good Night" song.

The period ended with the score
seven to nothing. The navy's ball was on the thirty yard line at the finish.

LA FOLLETTE OPENS
CAMPAIGN ON MONDAY

Senior Senator Will Begin Itinerary at Richland Center and Close at Beloit.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Madison, Wis., Nov. 27.—According to his complete itinerary, the details
of which were announced today, Senator La Follette put to have an unusually busy week in southern Wisconsin next week. His speaking dates are as follows:

Monday evening, Nov. 28.—Richland Center.
Tuesday evening—Dodgeville.
Wednesday at 1 p. m.—Argyle.
Wednesday evening—Monroe.
Thursday evening—Lancaster.
Friday evening—Platteville.

On Saturday morning, Nov. 29, Senator La Follette has been preparing his data
it is said that he has gathered sufficient material and has arranged it in form of a paper to be given at a new speech practically every evening at Monroe. It is intimated that the senator has something unusual to uncover.

With the exception of Argyle all of the speeches will be delivered in the evening and the daytime will be spent
by the senator in conference with his friends in the different localities. Inclemency of weather has caused the senator to refuse to do any outside speaking at this season of the year.

After the speech at Beloit, Senator La Follette will return to Madison and will immediately go to Washington to be present at the opening of congress.
As the hold-over United States Senator from this state he will present at the senate on Dec. 6, Senator Paul O.
Husting of Mayville, to take the oath
of office.

It is intimated by the La Follette
manager that the speeches in southern Wisconsin will be the opening of a series of addresses throughout the state, in which all important points will be touched. It is intimated that unless matters are urgent the senator
will immediately return to continue his engagements.

Speaks at Monroe.
Monroe, Wis., Nov. 27.—This city
will be among the first to be visited by Senator Robert M. La Follette, who opens his campaign on Monday.
It is expected that he will announce his presidential candidacy during his visit in this city. He will visit Monroe on Wednesday, Dec. 1, and will speak at the Turner Opera House. The senator has many former friends here
who are planning to make this a memorable visit for the senator, who has not been here since the last presidential campaign.

New French Loan
OF FOUR BILLIONS

Subscriptions Within Republic Figured to Reach Enormous Figure—Much Gold Paid.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Paris, Nov. 27.—Paul Leroy Beaulieu, the economist, estimated today
that subscriptions to the new French loan may amount to $4,000,000,000.
The new loan will be cash subscriptions, the remainder representing conversion into the new loan of earlier issues of treasury
bills and of national defense bonds.
No official figures are yet available.
Promptness with which all classes
have responded to call of finance minister has given rise to many odd incidents. A man in a blue blouse of a peasant was asked to give a bank of France what denomination of bonds he desired. The clerk judged from his appearance he would subscribe from one hundred to one thousand francs.

"I don't care," the peasant replied,
"the less paper the better, but give me 100,000 francs worth."

He paid one-tenth of this sum in gold.

RACINE MURDERER

Lunacy Commission Declares Man in

Racine, Nov. 27.—George Zabajnik, Kasala, is sane at the present time
and was sane when he killed his victim on May 1, 1915, according to a verdict rendered at the lunacy commission late yesterday. It was the first lunacy commission ever called in a murder trial in this county. The local physicians composing the commission were out only a few minutes
before arriving at a verdict.

Zabajnik sought to escape the penalty for his crime by pleading insanity, immediately upon hearing the verdict. Judge J. H. Dalton of circuit court set the opening of trial for next Monday at ten o'clock. Zabajnik was in the court room when the verdict was read and took it meekly. He had been expected. Zabajnik admitted he put arsenic in his victim's food, vindicting his wife.

RAILROADS FAIL TO PROVIDE
TRANS-ATLANTIC TRANSPOR-

TERMINALS CONGESTED

Thousands of Carloads of Foodstuffs
and Merchandise Are Held Up at Seaboard for Want of Ships.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, Nov. 27.—The Delaware,
Lackawanna and Western railroad,
whose lines are choked as far back
as Scranton with loaded freight cars
which it cannot move, today instructed its agents to accept no more freight until further notice.

More than 6,000 loaded cars from the west, all containing grain, feed,
flour, copper and hundreds of other commodities, have virtually turned the terminals and sidings of the road into storage warehouses for weeks. Some of the cars have been here for eighty days.

Inquiry at other railroad offices developed that nearly every terminal
here is choked with freight cars
standing loaded and idle on sidings for hundreds of miles back along the line, and that other roads would be unable to handle the load.

For months New York mouth has been clogged with freight in excess of the facilities of the steamship companies attempting to handle it. The movement of the big wheat crops and the unprecedented demand in Europe
for copper, steel and other metals
used in warfare lately has swollen exports within the past sixty days to figures undreamed of before. In October alone exports were valued at approximately $175,000,000 left New York on 393 ships.

Most of the Lackawanna's congestion
is due, it is said, to the failure of western shippers to arrange for steamships before sending their freight to New York. In cases where such arrangements have been made, shipments went through virtually without a hitch. Thousands of cars, however,
have simply been turned over to railroads for transshipment here for Europe on such steamers as might be available.

Heavy Traffic of Exports Continues
Pittsburgh, Nov. 27.—Enormous shipments of freight for exports continue to go east from Pittsburgh district in spite of congested terminals at imports along the seaboard points and in yards along the various railroads between here and New York. Railroad officials said today that every possible
expedient was being used to handle
the tremendous freight movement,
even at additional expenditure of money
for additional terminals. One such terminal near New York was secured
by the Pennsylvania line this week and will take care of 800 cars. For a time it was feared some of the Pittsburgh shippers whose output is very largely for exports would be compelled to shut down next Monday until the railroad would care for the freight offered.

MILTON ALUMNI WIN FROM COLLEGE, 30 TO 15

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Milton, Nov. 25.—The annual basketball contest between the Alumni and the Milton college basketball five took place last night. The old timers, such as George Crandall, '14; George White, '14; J. S. Nelson, '14; and Wentworth, '14, did excellent work. The team work of the Alumni far surpassed that of the regulars. "Dick" Burdick starred for the college, while West also improved his opportunities after the old boys were "all in." Lamb and Hadden, '15, helped the Alumni most of the time and all showed up well. Lush's final shooting was remarkable. The final score was 30-15.

College: Lush, c; West, D. Burdick, A. Burdick, McLaughlin, Thornegate, Randolph, and Randolph, guards.
Old Timers: George Crandall, Lamb, Deland, Goble, forwards; White, Hadden, Hurley, and Crandall, guards. Referee—Davis.

CITY'S HEALTH GOOD
FEDERAL GOVERNMENT
RELATES IN REPORT

Record for Year of 1914 Show Department Active and Working for Interests Locally.

Janesville's disease record for 1914 is revealed in government reports just received. These reports are issued weekly by the United States Public Health Service. The last under date of Nov. 13, gives figures on the principal communicable diseases of all cities in the country between 10,000 and 100,000 population.

With an estimated population July 1, 1914, of 14,166, Janesville reported fifteen deaths from tuberculosis, together with twenty cases. The number of cases reported for each death was 1.33. There were two cases from typhoid fever, but no deaths. There were also five small-pox cases but no fatalities. Seven cases of scarlet fever were reported. Fifteen cases of measles were reported. Diphtheria ranked low with only nine cases and no mortality.

It should be kept in mind that a relatively large number of reported cases of communicable disease, as indicated by a high case rate, and more especially when accompanied by a relatively small number of deaths, as indicated by a low fatality rate, usually means that a healthy department of the city is active, and that the cases of the disease are being properly reported by the practicing physicians. It does not necessarily mean that the disease is more prevalent in this city than in other cities. A high fatality rate may mean that the disease was unusually virulent in a city, that the physicians did not treat it with the success usual elsewhere, or that they did not report all of their cases to the health department. On the other hand, an unusually low fatality rate may be due to the fact that the disease in the city was unusually mild, that the physicians treated it with unusual success, that the practicing physicians reported their cases satisfactorily, or that the number of deaths was incomplete or the assignment of the causes of death inaccurate.

MADE AFTER VERDICT

Defendants Ask to Have Verdict Set Aside and New Trial Ordered.—
"Poll of Jury Taken."

Following the reading of the verdict in the case of Mrs. Eulalia Abraham against John A. Rock county resident who died several years ago in the town of Avalon and whose estate was supposed to have been settled a year after his death. This money, it is said, was turned over by a local attorney to a law firm that had been given the claim by heirs residing in Scotland who claimed that they had never received their full share of the estate. Just how the case could have been closed up and the sanction of the court given with such a summary, this outstanding is apparently a mystery. The affair has created considerable comment in legal circles, although there was no court action.

In All Sorts of Weather Peruna Is An Ideal Protector

Mr. George A. Douglas, No. 49 East 131st St., New York, N. Y., writes: "As my work compels me to spend a large part of my time out of doors, I have often been drenched by sudden rains, chilled by extreme cold, and I soon found that I had a bad case of catarrh of the bronchial tubes. I tried plasters and medicine, but nothing I did seemed to help me until I took Peruna. This splendid medicine took right hold of me, drove every bit of the disease out, and built me up until I felt stronger than I had for years. Whenever I have been exposed now a couple of doses always restores me. Peruna is an ideal protector in all sorts of weather."

Peruna has probably cured more cases of catarrh than any other remedy in existence. Catarrh nearly always depends upon a depressed nerve center. Peruna is a natural invigorant that enables the system to overcome the catarrhal condition. We have thousands of unalloyed testimonials to prove these statements beyond all cavil.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

Watch for these stories which will appear on the Gazette sport page.

HIS LAST LOVE LETTER

At intervals through the night the little woman heard the subdued voices of those who watched over her dear dead—her husband. Snatches of sleep came to her during the hours that dragged slowly by.

With the first light of morning, the great cutting pain returned, that, like a knife, had entered her heart when those at the bedside said, "He is gone," and when she arose she staggered like an aged person.

Dropping back on the bed, she gave herself up for a moment to the weakness and pain.

Then the stirring of a child and the tossing of a wee hand caught her eye. Rising, she went to the bed and patted the baby gently. Then she went to another little bed where two children slept.

"I am all they have now," she said, tears blurring the picture of the little brown head and the one with golden hair. "For them I must live and love and work and be patient."

Through the soft folds of a widow's veil the Little Woman watched loving hands hide a newly made grave under fragrant flowers, and when it was all over she returned home.

It was a little home, but everywhere were remembrances of him, and tears came to her eyes as she recalled the many comforts and conveniences he had arranged for her.

"But it might be worse," she said bravely. "I might not have a home." Then a thought came suddenly. The look of sorrow on her face gave place to one of great distress. In the worry and pain of the last few weeks she had forgotten the mortgage.

It had not before seemed large, but that was because he had been there. Now it loomed before her in tremendous proportions.

Alone in the world with three little children; no income; no bank account; the mortgage; the home; how dear that little place had become must it be sold to pay the debt? The realization of her condition came slowly—too grave to be grasped at once.

She determined to be brave and for a time tried to solve the vexing problem; but it was no use. Turn any way she would, she could find no escape from that awful debt. Wearied and depressed she buried her face in her hands while sobs of grief and disappointment racked her frail body.

A step sounded on the walk, but she paid no heed. Some one was at the door, but she did not answer, until the knocking grew insistent. The visitor proved to be a messenger from the bank. She noticed the package he extended towards her and inquired, "Is it the mortgage? I cannot pay it now."

"These are your husband's papers," replied the messenger, handing her the package. On the wrapper in her husband's writing she read, "To be delivered to my wife on the day of my funeral."

The package contained a number of legal papers and letters. On one envelope was written, "My last love letter." Opening it the little woman read:

"My Dearest Wife:—When you receive this I will be far away from you; so far that the only answer you can give me will be your unchanging love. I am writing this alone in the office where I sit thinking of you and the babies. I wonder how old and how large they will be when you get this letter. Very old, I hope. This is my last love letter. Do you remember the first? How strange it seemed to be writing it, and how happy I was! And do you remember the answer you wrote? I shall never forget it. You will find it with my valuables. With my first letter I sent flowers; with this I enclose a life insurance policy.

I have chosen this policy because the Central Life company is safe and well managed, and because I can get more and better protection in it for the money invested than in any other.

You may be surprised how I managed with the expense of the family to keep the policy paid. But you will remember we often did without things we wanted, and you will know why, after your long illness I borrowed money. I was tempted sometimes to let it drop, but I dared not. My love for you said 'No.' Now it is yours—yours and the children's—and you need not want for any necessary comforts if you manage well. This knowledge makes it worth ten times what the policy cost. It comes to you as an expression of my love.

Your loving husband."

JOHN GOLLNER HAS WRITTEN FACTS ON GERMAN SITUATION

FORMER RESIDENT WRITES FROM STUTTGART ON WAR TOPICS.

LETTER PASSED CENSOR

Also Enclosed Many Pictures and Post Cards of Scenes Taken Behind the Firing Line.

George S. Parker is the recipient of a most interesting letter from John Gollner, who is living in Germany behind the firing lines, although it has been subject to an aerial bombardment which is almost laughably described in the letter which through the courtesy of Mr. Gollner we are able to print. Enclosed with the letter were specimens of the bread wrappers and many photographs of friends of Mr. Gollner now at the front. One interesting item is a postcard returned to Mr. Gollner which he had written to a soldier in the trench with the significant expression "Auf dem Felde der Ehre," stamped across the front.

A note to the English censor enclosed in the letter says: "My English Censor this letter is written by an American citizen to another. It will not do you any good to destroy it, as a copy is kept which some day will surely find my friend in the U. S. A. The truth shall be known and will be known."

"Respectfully,"

"JOHN GOLLNER."

The letter follows:

Stuttgart, 28 October, 1915.

Mr. Geo. S. Parker, Janesville, Wis., U. S. A.

Dear Sir:—

I have not seen any letters from you other than American firms for over two months and I am sure you are not getting any news from the front. This morning's mail was a pleasant surprise for us. It brought your letters of Sept. 4, Oct. 2, and small parts of another. The letterhead was "John Gollner, 310 Vail street, Janesville, Wis., U. S. A." and I was glad to see that you were still alive. The main thing is that you got some news at all. We knew of course from the government reports that noble England is throwing all our might into the war. We cannot prevent it. Same treatment is given to the shipments of the great free republic called U. S. A. Nobody is kicking as long as war contraband is taken, but why destroy all newspapers and 90 per cent of even private letters? Why? Because England is afraid of the moment when the truth will be known. It cannot be kept forever. It will be known in full. (much is known already) some day and then let the world judge. I brought this terrible war upon the world and who are the barbarians. I am sure that a good many papers have been sent to you from friends in U. S. A. also letters from me. I have written many letters to you, but very many have been destroyed. Last week already I read that Dutch and Norwegian lines are now able to carry letters safely to U. S. A. and I really hope that this letter will reach you. I will write you in a few days again. I will also write to other friends. I do business with in U. S. A. anything important will have to be repeated, as there are few chances that many 1915 letters reached the U. S. A. Some rumor exists that our English friends have been sending letters and telegrams and will not let such pass, while private letters have a little better chance.

Mr. Bliss wrote once, long ago, in his paper that John Gollner is too optimistic. It was at a time when his paper—like nearly all of them when over English reports were printed—just counted the days when Russians will march in in Budapest and Vienna, and then the German army will march in. I still read every day the English and French papers; every one of them in Germany has them! In Italy or France thirty days prison for the one who dares to import a paper from Germany. In civilized Russia a man may be hanged for such a crime. England does not bring anyone the daily German report, but only fragments of it. I know it. I compare it. I remember when a Lord M. P., a very good member of the House of Commons, in the English Parliament, said in the English Parliament that he thought that civilian people shall be killed when the English march into Germany, but he insisted that every factory, every spinning shall not be only bombed, but also destroyed. This was long ago. Mr. M. P. was his opinion since. He will feel happy if London factories are not destroyed by the Germans. In my opinion the German means the beginning of the end and I have written to you and written so often late 1914 and ever since, that Germany cannot be destroyed and crushed, not even if the whole rest of the world should unite against it. This is what I have written to you and others over a year ago. I now I underline them. We in Stuttgart have been visited by enemy flyers on 9-21, 8 a. m. and 9 a. m. and I wonder that they have not come often. Mr. Bliss reached the King's place at the theatre or depot, but he was at different streets. Our American consul Mr. Higgins was near of getting one, as one did some damage to the house next to his. Seven persons were killed and many wounded. The whole city, schools, factories, etc., had "flyer drills" long ago. Everybody knows what the white cannon at signs meant and hurried in the cellar. And not ashamed to tell the truth. I was there too. It's a horrible and a real at a dangerous place or on the street, as we poor civilians are tied to the soil. Just before the second call at 9 a. m., before when the shooting began for a moment had a chance to see the flyer and the shrapnell bursting. It was worth of taking a risk for a few seconds. No wonder some people don't listen to advice and want to enjoy that sight. A letter carrier, Mr. Bliss, both were killed. Another bomb killed a shoemaker at his bench, another some horses, another some soldiers, etc. Two only Americans have lost their lives on the Arabic and one learned with much regret that our friend Dr. Woods was one of them. Long ago when I heard of Mr. Joe Bostwick's death, I have written to Bob Bostwick. Wonder if he ever received my letter.

Today the German troops will reach the Bulgarians in the northeastern part of Serbia and open the road from Aulwerpen to Bagdad, in Asia. The entire powers in the meantime are holding important meetings and every one of them is trying hard to prove that the other fellow should go and stop the Germans. England as usual does her best to mix in some more nations, just now they are begging in Portugal a handful of soldiers. It's funny how nice they are coming one by one giving the central powers all opportunity to beat one after the other. England is also sending some 25,000 men to Saloniki, of course Australians and Canadians, while the pure

What big mistake! If England remained neutral they would have pocketed hundreds of millions. Grey thought he can do it even when taking part in the war. Otherwise he would not have said 8-4-15 and later "business as usual."

Colder days are coming, let's hope those millions of soldiers of all nations will not have to live another winter in their holes. The Germans understand it easier than any others. Every man gets not only warm clothes but also a sheep coat and many thousands to not soldier ovens are shipped to the fronts. The Germans is a really big fellow, but think of the delicate Frenchmen! How long will French blood flow for England's interests? French men and French soil suffered the most.

The letter is getting too long. It will cut Mr. Gollner, so let me finish it.

A business letter will follow in a few days. Just few more words before closing.

The truth as observed by a neutral man who travels around in spite of the war and sees the facts on all sides. Germany & Co. get all the money (war loans) they need at home at a rate of about 5 per cent. The other side, borrow in U. S. A., etc., and pay over 8 per cent (Morgan commission included). Others have to use all tricks to get money, have to bring savages from all corners of the world. Germany & Co. use their own men in reserve, such men as have not seen field service yet. Our cities are crowded with these overpaid men. The government has been kicking. The losses are surely big on all sides. Poor Italy did not gain a mile for five months. They are as far as the Austrians, then go the first five days without standing in any way, and funny even the Italians report victories twice a day!

I read in English papers that Germany calls in their men up to 65 years. All these overpaid men are still at home unless they voluntarily go. A carvell was sentenced to death. Why? Because he had the same misfortune in war? Spying on his death? Mrs. Gollner joins me sending greetings to you Mr. Parker, to your family and all friends.

JOHN GOLLNER.

FIRST PENSION PAID TO A BELOIT WOMAN

Order For $15 Drawn Upon County at Direction of Municipal Judge J. B. Clark.

The first order for a mother's pension in Rock county has been paid at the office of County Treasurer Livermore, the amount being $15 in favor of a Beloit woman with two children dependent upon her for support. The pension, which will continue for a year at $15 a month, is drawn at the direction of Municipal Judge John B. Clark of Beloit, who has investigated the case.

There are several other mother's pension cases pending in the two municipal courts for the county and the orders will doubtless be drawn within a few weeks. The law under which such money is available was passed at the last session of the legislature. It provides that the money shall be paid out of the county treasury and that at the end of the year, or on January 1, the county clerk shall render an accounting of such funds paid out, to both the secretary of the board of control and the board of supervisors.

The board of control, upon proper investigation, will then certify to the amount expended and if approved shall report to the secretary of state that the state shall be allowed the credit for a third of the amount on the state taxes to be collected.

The other two-thirds of the money is charged back to the towns, cities and villages where residents have taken advantage of the pension fund.

The county board at its November session appropriated $1,000 for this purpose, the maximum amount to which any mother is entitled under the law is $40 a month.

JOKERS JOKED BUT WHO WAS THE GOAT?

Clever Scheme That Went Wrong—Turkeys and Geese That Failed to Materialize.

The Tuesday night before Thanksgiving several practical jokes were selected a victim for their joke and invited a well known tonsorial artist to go with them on a turkey-geese stealing expedition. First they telephoned their "fancier friend" to be ready and then loaded an auto and drove to the scene of the "joke."

Whether the victim had a case of cold feet when the actual time came or whether he smelled the "game" is a question, but he refused to budge from the automobile and the jokers approached the barnyard alone. Of course the farmer was ready, and with shouts and firing of a rusty gun the pursuit began. The jokers ran by the automobile and their victim hid himself in a corner.

Mr. Farmer came along and according to one tale poked his gun into the car and demanded he surrender. "Please Mister Farmer I did not do anything at all. I started out with the jokers for a ride, not knowing where they were going. You can shoot me or arrest me, but honest I did not mean to steal your turkeys." However, the victim tells a different conversation, but the tale ends with the jokers returning to town and the question of "Who was the joke on. The jokers, the farmer or the victim?"

if you feel that way about it when you get good service from your tires, but there is a deeper and more understandable reason.

The tire that you and every other motorist undoubtedly want most is not the result of hit or miss efforts.

Some great factory has gone to the limit in giving you the best that human ingenuity can produce, and stakes its reputation on the result.

That's how Diamond Tires are built and the great factory behind them is the largest rubber factory in the world.

THE GAZETTE'S MOTORIST PROBLEM DEPARTMENT

(Published Saturdays.)

Motorist Department, The Gazette.—I have an engine. When the engine runs the gasoline leaks profusely from the distributor. It also leaks for about two minutes after stopping the engine. The drain cock is kept closed always. Do you think the air intake is open too far? W. B.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.—The radiator on my car will not circulate the water and appears to have become partially stopped up. What shall I do to clear it out? The pump throws the water into the engine and into the upper basin of the radiator. As soon as the upper basin is full the water runs out the waste pipe. The water is so slow getting through the radiator and down to the pump that it practically destroys circulation and the engine gets hot and evaporates the water. Please advise me what to do.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.—I have a 1915. Have run it 4,500 miles. Notice a roar muffler explosion when changing from high to low after putting in brake or on slowing up from traveling fast.—W. K.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.—I have a 1915 six cylinder touring car with Spittler magneto and transformer. While riding one day the motor began to miss fire and lose power and then stopped altogether. Have not been able to get it to start since. It has dual ignition, but I have always used the magneto for starting and running. I can get a spark at the transformer from the battery, but not at the spark plugs. Have cleaned the breaker box platinum points, tightened the connections, looked over all the wire, but cannot find the trouble. Have never had the magneto off the machine. Can you advise me from what you state it appears that the secondary current, short circuits either from cable leading the magneto up to coil, or from cable carrying high tension current from No. 4 terminal of coil to distributor of magneto. If you mean that the spark you get at the transformer is a secondary current, spark, the current must short circuit between No. 4 terminal of coil and distributor terminal of magneto.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.—I have been reading your columns and thought that perhaps you could give me a little information. Would it be possible to mix kerosene with gasoline and use the mixture the same as if it were pure gasoline—that is, could you use it in a plain carburetor? If so, how much kerosene would be used to one gallon of gasoline? C. S.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.—This is necessary owing to kerosene being a heavier fuel and not vaporizing properly when cold. It is not advisable to use kerosene owing to its slow burning and also greater carbonizing of combustion chamber. The gasoline obtained today is a much lower grade than used a few years ago and would not advise using kerosene with it.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.—In running my car at a slow rate of speed it sparks regularly and cylinders never miss fire, but on raising speed they fall to the occasionally, and for this reason I can only run at a moderate rate of speed. Please tell me the trouble and how to eliminate it.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.—The trouble from what we can gather from your communication is probably due to faulty adjustment of carburetor. Mixture may be too rich. This can be overcome by reducing tension on auxiliary air valve spring on some types of carburetors or by cutting down on high speed adjustment of needle valve on other types.

JUNEAU'S TRADING POST IS BEING REPRODUCED

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 27.—A reproduction of the trading post erected on the present site of Milwaukee by Solomon Juneau. Milwaukee's first white settler, is being made today by Dr. S. A. Barrett, curator of anthropology at the museum.

Dr. Barrett is today gathering material to help him in his work. He has several sketches and woodcuts of the first trading post and with the descriptions furnished in history he hopes to get the building fairly exact in detail. The post was built from tamarac poles cut by Juneau from the tract, which is now the second ward. The museum has several relics, one possessed by the Juneau family.

CHAPTER VII.

How Kit Fared.

Kit hardly dared think what the consequences would be if the trapper thieves discovered that the fox was no longer there. And there was no telling what might not happen to the boy. Kit's eyes flashed at the thought. They must not find him. When the trapper had him for an instant, he uttered a loud cry. In the hope that the robbers, hearing it, would pay less attention to their immediate surroundings. That he reasoned was all he could do. Luck must be trusted for the rest. Then he directed all his energy to getting over the ground. And how he did go! For he had dodged his pace so that it would correspond with Ned's, but now he was doing his best. He fairly flew along.

A moment later the robbers came rushing around the turn. Ned heard them with thankfulness in his heart. Ned must have escaped. In the excitement of the last few minutes, he had forgotten his own danger. Now it was too late to regret that. A vivid suddenness. The crack of a revolver sounded from behind and a bullet into the ice not far away.

This shot was the signal for a fusillade. Bullets pattered all around. Fortunately, it was not Ned's head that was being shot at. The accurate shooting was impossible. Otherwise, Kit would have been in a dangerous place indeed.

Kit was not at all surprised. He thought to himself, But, strangely enough, he felt as calm as he had ever felt in his whole life. Then came a command—

"Halt, and we won't hurt you. Give us the fox and you can go free."

"Who are you?" Kit lunged back, at the same time increasing his speed. "Never you mind," came the answer. "You must hand over the fox. Stay where you are, and the— Say, what the—"

Knowing that his chance was now or never, Kit had suddenly made a dash for the river. Immediately the firing broke out again. But the boy did not falter. He gained the bank, and scrambled up it. At whatever cost to himself he must draw the robbers away from Ned. As he ran, he still clutched the skin of the red fox. This he meant to use in an emergency. In the dark it might be mistaken for the silver fox, and thus afford him an opportunity for escape.

Behind him he could hear the crackling of the bushes as the men clambered up the bank. They were shouting and firing wild shots in the air.

Then Kit conceived a brilliant idea. He rushed back to the river, thinking that the men would keep on blundering through the woods. He reached the river and waited for a moment that he had outwitted the thieves. But this delusion was soon shattered. Three men were standing on the ice, not five feet away, waiting for him.

"Didn't work, did it?" one of them laughed gruffly. "You realized the voice of last night's intruder."

"Got you, at last," said another. This one advanced swiftly and laid a hand upon the boy's shoulder. But there was no need for flight. The suddenness of his capture had bewildered him completely.

"Come with that fox skin, now," ordered the man. "Kit collected, quick about it." Slowly, Kit collected his wits. And as he took full cognizance of the scene, he saw that his chances for escape were very slim. Kit decided to take on desperate chances.

"Here's your old fox skin," he called, and with a quick movement he flung the skin of the red fox far out into the water.

"Get that skin, Spencer," called Kit's captor. "I'll hold this kid."

The boy's heart sank as he heard these words. He had hoped that the men would crowd around the skin and give him a chance to dart into the woods. The man addressed as Spencer, and the other, who had not yet taken any part in the proceedings, rushed after the fox, which had been still farther away than Kit alone with the man who held him. But he was powerless.

Something whizzed by his cheek, so close that he felt the wind of it. At the same moment, a loud shout was released. The man uttered a sharp cry of pain, and the report of a rifle echoed and re-echoed among the hills. Through the trees, a captor had been shot through the arm.

Without knowing whether the bullet had been meant for him or the man, or who his unknown deliverer was, Kit went speeding away in the darkness.

CHAPTER VIII.

What happened to Ned.

With a wildly beating heart, Ned Craig waited, crouched there in the bushes. He heard Kit's yell, and then the robbers were upon him. They rushed by on both sides, and then a clump of bushes, but they did not see him. It was not until they had disappeared beyond the bend in the river that he felt that he was safe. Then he rose slowly and began to retrace his steps.

He hugged the shore and proceeded cautiously. Although the preservation of the fox was upon his mind as possible, he would take no chances.

For almost an hour he walked, thus. The moon rose at last and cast a mellow light on the landscape. Suddenly, Ned perceived that things had changed. A familiar look. Closer inspection revealed the fact that he was about abreast of Kit's cabin. The thought immediately struck him that he should get as far from the place as possible. But where should he go? There was no settlement up the river for over forty miles, Kit had said, and he was unacquainted with the country. It would be sheer foolishness to try that way. And down the river were the trapper thieves. What should he do? Hadn't he, Ned Craig, ought to know enough to overcome such difficulties? But what could he do? Why go up to the cabin, of course, and stay in the loft all night, and in the morning start for Keewano. The robbers would not be able to come back to the cabin. Why, the answer was very simple.

Ned left the river and walked through the woods toward the cabin. He found it in much the same condition as when he had been there. Kit had made their hurried departure about an hour before. The door, however, was open again, showing that the robbers must have entered it.

"Here's hoping that there's no one inside," Ned muttered, as he paused on the threshold. At that moment the sound of firing broke out, far down the river. That meant the thieves had been upon Kit. Ned felt suddenly anxious. Kit had said that he would be safe, but this did not seem to corroborate his statement. As quickly as he had begun the shooting stopped. There was a long silence, and then a report of one rifle. A sharp, clear-toned report. Ned started. He had heard the report of that rifle before. He felt sure of it. But, where?

The cabin was deserted. Ned took a heavy blanket from the bed and climbed into the loft, where he lay down on the rough boards. The silver fox he placed under his head as he lay. He was not at all surprised. He had heard the report of that rifle before. He felt sure of it. But, where?

The cabin was deserted. Ned took a heavy blanket from the bed and climbed into the loft, where he lay down on the rough boards. The silver fox he placed under his head as he lay. He was not at all surprised. He had heard the report of that rifle before. He felt sure of it. But, where?

"This is a dicens of a note," said one of them. "Will we have to stay here all night, Spencer?"

"I hardly think so," was the reply. "but we've got to fix Bill up before we leave. It's a dirty hole he's got in his arm."

"Aw, it ain't so worse," said one, evidently not at all concerned. "I'll get to the nest, if the rest of you can stand carryin' me. What gets me is who fired that shot. It came from across the river, and it couldn't have been one of our men."

"That's what I thought," Spencer said. "If it hadn't been for that Kit McDonald, but it would hardly do with hostile men in the neighborhood. It might have been the mounted police for all we know."

"Yes," another broke in. "I don't believe the kid had the fox anyway. I believe the other one had it, wherever he went."

"Come on, an' quit your talkin' if you're goin' to fix my arm tonight, Jake," remonstrated Bill.

"That's right," agreed Spencer, who seemed to be the leader of the band. "Here, give me your arm and I'll see to it."

A silence ensued. Ned breathed a sigh of relief. At any rate Kit was safe. And so was he if the robbers did not try to come up stairs. Then he thought it might be a good plan to start down the river and try to find Kit. It would surely be the safest line because he knew where the robbers were, and at any other time he would not. Yes, he would go after Kit.

A long time elapsed. At last the men left the cabin. Ned waited for another long period and then ascended the ladder. All was still outside. He finally ventured to the door and peered out. No one was in sight. He opened the door and stepped out on the snow.

"What's that?"

"Somebody's in the cabin!"

Ned recognized both voices. The men must have been waiting on the other side of the cabin. Had he known it only five minutes had gone by since Spencer started to bandage Bill's wound. But there was no time to stand thinking. Trapped though he was, he would lose gamely.

With the silver fox clutched in his hand, he ran across the little clearing. The robbers followed in hot pursuit. He gained the woods, and then—a man seemed to start from the shadow of a tree. This apparition seized him by the shoulder, and with the other hand grasped his shoulder.

"I want that fox," he hissed.

The skin was torn from the boy's hand. The figure vanished in the night. And the next moment the trapper thieves were upon him and he was a prisoner.

MILWAUKEE COUNTY FETES OCCASION OF COMPLETION OF 100 MILES GOOD ROADS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 27.—Milwaukee city and county are today celebrating the completion of 100 miles of permanent good roads in Milwaukee county.

Three governors were expected to attend—Dunne, Illinois; Ferris, Michigan; and Philip, Wisconsin. Other star attraction is Mayor William Hale Thompson, Chicago. Highway officials from six other states are in the city for the celebration.

The biggest motor parade in the history of Milwaukee passed through the streets at noon today. The streets were decorated and flags were flying from almost every building.

The affair will close tonight with a monster banquet at the Hotel Pheasant.

This county now has over 90 miles of concrete roads and more than 100 miles of improved highway. Plans have been made to connect the roads so that an automobile may travel all day on concrete roads in the county without passing the same way twice.

CLINTON MARRIES

Clinton, Nov. 26.—On Thanksgiving day at Mt. Horeb, Wis., William E. Duxstad was united in marriage to Miss Dora Danielson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Danielson. Mr. Duxstad is one of Clinton's most successful and prosperous farmers and a man of irreproachable character and numbers his friends by the score, who extend to the happy couple all good wishes. They will reside on the groom's farm southwest of Clinton.

Reports from the hospital at Janesville say that F. H. Miller is doing as nicely as could be expected. He has the sympathy of a large circle of friends here.

PROLOGUE.

Here is one of the most dramatic novels of modern times and a distinctly American product. Based on one of the great theatrical productions of present fame, it unleashes a flood of human emotions which will sweep the reader irresistibly with it. All the elements of a gripping romance are here, and the ordeal of the principal characters is one that will hold the reader intensely interested from beginning to end. Love and death, trial for life, a melodramatic confession wrung from the tortured soul of a wife and mother, combine to make this story a masterpiece which will live long in American fiction.

CHAPTER I.

A Human Life at Stake.

THE big, gloomy trial room of the criminal branch of the supreme court, part I, was crowded to the very doors with a throng of expectant people, lawyers and law clerks, newspaper reporters and artists, business men attracted by the momentousness of the occasion, court attendants, detectives in plain clothes. And here and there loomed the pines of feminine headwear worn by women drawn through morbid curiosity to the arena of the penal law, where a man must face his accusers on the dread charge of "murder in the first degree."

For months the newspapers had displayed the details of the crime. Extra editions galore had carried screaming headlines concerning the new developments in the case of the people of the state of New York versus Robert Strickland. Indeed, the cause celebre had been commented on so widely that the attorneys for the defendant had moved for a change of venue, arguing that Strickland could not get a fair trial in New York county because any man picked for the jury would have heard or read something detrimental to the accused. It was well known to David was a member of a family controlling one of the largest life insurance companies in the country. He was a banker of big operations and was generally reputed to be one of the most daring and, at the same time, successful plunders on the Stock Exchange. His wife's diamonds had been frequently described in the society columns of the daily prints on the occasion of her appearances in the gilded, dazzling splurge of the Four Hundred in the "horseshoe" at the Metropolitan Opera House.

And so there were reasons why the multitude should be engrossed in the proceedings destined to determine whether or not Robert Strickland, active business man, should be sent to the electric chair in that bare, oblong death chamber on the bleak Hudson hillside always yawning for more victims. It was no ordinary sordid or drunken crime participated in by denizens of the vast metropolitan underworld this time. No, indeed. Here was a choice morsel, a dainty tidbit, in the way of a criminal prosecution, a case where two of the best known families of the greatest American city were involved. It was admitted on all sides that no indictment since that accusing United States Senator Jeffrey of poisoning his wife had caused such stir. The selection of the jury proved, as it usually does in a case where capital punishment is involved, a slowly drawn out affair. Some members of the special panel which had been drawn opposed the death penalty and favored life imprisonment for murder. They forgot that even the Book of Holy Writ had laid down the law in this tragic circumstance. "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."

Or perhaps they merely made the assertion as to their belief on the subject in order to be excused from serving. Other talesmen had business engagements out of town or felt that their health would not stand the confinement for days in the stuffy, humid courtroom, but these and similar excuses were brusquely swept aside by the court. The worthy citizens felt better, however, when they were reminded that at the finish of each day's session they would be escorted under guard in an auto to a fashionable hotel uptown and there dined on the choicest viands of the season at the county's expense. One man appealed to the sympathy of the court when he asked to be excused because his mother had died. The judge was on the point of letting him go when, as though the result of a sudden inspiration, he asked the talesman:

"When did your mother die?"

The reply finally came with much stammering and trembling:

"Two years ago, your honor."

"Fined $250 for contempt of court," was the retort of the justice.

Gradually, however, the jury box began to fill, and after No. 11 had been accepted by both the prosecutor and Counselor Arbuckle for the defense all heads craned forward as an interesting name was called in the important tones of the clerk of the court. This name was none other than that of John Summers, the multimillionaire manufacturer, who had devoted a large part of his fortune to philanthropic and sociological research work.

He glowered ominously at several newspaper reporters who he recollected had haunted him in dunes past, and then with that prelude accomplished thoroughly to his satisfaction he faced the court.

District Attorney Gray began questioning him.

"What's your name?"

"John Summers."

"Mr. Summers, what is your occupation?"

"Electrical engineer and manufacturer."

"Are you in business for yourself?"

"Yes, sir; at 1 Madison avenue, but I no longer take active charge of my business. In a sense I have retired."

"Mr. Summers, are you opposed to capital punishment?"

"No, not at all."

"Do you know Robert Strickland, the defendant in this case? Stand up, Strickland," commanded the prosecutor.

Strickland arose. It was now noted that his right arm was in a sling.

"No," came the answer.

Strickland resumed his seat.

"Do you know any one related to him?" continued Gray.

"No."

"Did you know Gerald Trask, for whose murder Strickland is on trial?" pressed Gray.

"No; I've often read the gentleman's name in the papers, but I never met him."

"Do you know Mrs. Trask, the widow of the murdered man?"

"No."

"Do you know Stanley Glover, who was Mr. Trask's private secretary at the time of his death?"

Gray paused thoughtfully.

"Glover? I'm not sure."

"Call Mr. Glover," said Gray.

An attendant opened a side door and admitted a young man.

"Stanley Glover," he pronounced.

"This is Mr. Glover," explained Gray.

"No; I don't know him," was the reply.

"You may retire, Mr. Glover," directed the prosecutor.

"Do you know any one associated with the district attorney's office, or Mr. Arbuckle, the defendant's attorney?"

"No."

"Are you familiar with the facts in this case?"

"Very slightly. I don't read details of murder cases," replied Summers.

The Heart of Night Wind

A Story of the Great Northwest

By VINGIE E. ROE

Illustrations by Ray Walters

Copyright by Dodd, Mead and Company.

It was the long, shining body of a giant dog, still tugging at the reins tied to his collar, a dripping black horse, tired to the point of falling, and a woman who sat fastened to the cante with stripes of broadcloth, and whose face was not good to look upon. It bore upon its features the brand of too much horror.

They flocked around her with cheers and eager hands, and questions that tumbled over each other. But John Daily thrust them all aside to seize her wrist and demand word of Sandry and Siletz.

"They're—up behind—the Hog Back," she shuddered as she spoke that name. "We found Hampden—setting the—fres—with candles."

Here there were awed mutterings. "He—shot that—Preacher. He said —the East Belt deed—was recorded all right—but that—he owned—the recorder."

She seemed dully bent on straightening out some tangle. "Sandry is—a man—despite all. Get Hampden—if he's alive. No, I don't mean—that. He—sent me down. The horse was—near done."

As she slid down into Daily's arms she said with her last ounce of strength but with such commanding spirit that he knew she was in deadly earnest. "Get me—a conveyance—at once. I want to be in Toledo—for the—night train—out."

Thus it came, that, as night closed down blue with rain over the tortured country, two things of import to the fortunes of the Dillingworth and his owner were taking place. Poppy Ordway stood on the platform of the dreary station at the lost little town on the backwater, bound for the outside world and the far cities.

At the same moment yet one more procession was coming slowly down from among the peaks, a line of men—a long line, for weary as they were dozens had followed the foreman into the wrecked, mud-deep forest—who bore tenderly among them two slings. It was a significant fact that scattered along that scarecrow line was every man of Sandry's old crew who had gone over to Hampden.

In one sling there swung gently the still figure of the Preacher, his Book upon his breast, its martial flute beside it, its glimmerings of the Past forgotten, its wistful searchings ended.

In the other lay Sandry, his right hand clasping two small dark ones whose owner trudged faithfully beside him refusing all offers of assistance.

A holy joy was in his heart, his lips moved noiselessly in the rolling Latin of a "Te Deum." This was the hour for which he had carelessly learned it at college.

Unashamed he acknowledged the existence of that Power which he had once denied to Siletz.

And the little maid who had lost her soul for love lifted wondering eyes toward the west ridge, hidden in the dim distance, where her sanctuary, the seven-foot fir stump, waited in vain for her rites of worship.

There was a wistful pathos in her calm acceptance of the mighty price which had been asked of her, and yet she was content. She had offered both her soul and body, exalted, glorified, in that she might serve this man.

Where her soul had been there was a sweeping, burning, glorious passion which tightened her clasp on Sandry's hand. Neither she nor the young owner realized that they had exchanged places on the path of life.

The procession, headed by John Daily who carried one end of Sandry's sling and was filled with a generous joy in that he had found these two alive, wound slowly down from the cup behind the Hog Back, penetrating that fringe of pines at its foot which had formed the trap. They were now but hideous, blackened shapes, monsters that towered frightfully into the rain, their bases smoking here and there where a bowlder shielded stubborn fires.

Close along the face of the giant cliff they pressed, taking the shortest way.

Suddenly, without warning, they came full upon a huddled heap that lay at its base. It was pitifully flat and broken, as if it had fallen from a great height, and it bore upon a shoulder a dreary crimson stain, washed and widened by the rain.

Daily halted and sent a cry along the line.

They touched the thing with awed amazement, turning up in the blue dusk the heavy face of the Yellow Pines owner.

Hampden, with the aid of the towering spine and the sheer depths, had made good his words. They would never send him to the chair.

And with the passing of the wondrous face under the disheveled gold hair had gone his last desire.

They hastily constructed another sling and added one more burden to the procession.

So at last and forever Walter Sandry came unto his own. There was yet timber in the Coast country. The East Belt was all but free of the shadow. Those old hidden records should be unearthed through Hampden's boast, or he would file on it legitimately himself, for that confession of Frazer's recorded deed would invalidate the O'Connell filing.

His enemy was gone—in shame and wrath and dishonor. He had won his fight.

That old crime, done in poetic justice under the Right Law of primal man, troubled him not at all, for he saw the glory of his father's face, heard his "I am at peace."

Beside him walked that love of which he had dreamed, the pearl of price which he had so nearly lost in his blindness. Before him went his tried friend, big John Daily, whose heart had shut on its own pain and opened to him the more.

At the camp waited the white-haired general who was a mother to him.

Here was his life from this time forth, amid the stark forces of a virgin country. The cities were far away, remote.

He had heard the Winds of God upon the Sounding Board of the Hills and they had shown him Deity. He was no longer a questioner, an agnostic. He had come too close to the bare heavens.

Thus he was borne down the dripping valley, filled with a vast peace, content—a Westerner at last.

"Sandy," whispered Siletz, as the procession wound up the slope to the cook-shack, lifting troubled, adoring dark eyes to his, "will it make any difference to you that I have no soul? Will my heart do?"

And Sandy could only hold more tightly the two small brown hands.

THE END.

Had the Proper Name.

"Why do you call 'em fountain pens? I should say reservoir pen would be the better name. A reservoir contains liquids; a fountain throws 'em around." "I think fountain-pen is the proper name," said the party of the second part.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

HOW AN ENGINEER KEEPS WELL.

D. G. Dunaphant of Monette, Mo., has run an engine 25 years on the Frisco railroad and the only medicine he ever has taken is Foley's Honey and Tar, although exposed to heat and to cold more than most men in other walks of life. He says: "I always keep it in my house and recommend it to all who have a bad cough or cold." Foley's Honey and Tar relieves bronchial trouble, hoarseness, inflamed or tickling throat, opens stopped air passages, heals and soothes and brings normal breathing.

BEGAN LIFE AS COAL MINER

A story of American pluck, perseverance, and ambition, is that of Rev. N. W. The teacher, a lady of uncertain age, was having a hard time teaching Johnny the names of the kings of England.

STIRS UP SENTIMENT FOR BETTER DEFENSE

WISCONSIN BRANCH OF NATIONAL SECURITY LEAGUE BEGINS AN ACTIVE CAMPAIGN.

EXPORT TRADE BOOMS

Demand For American and Wisconsin Products of Every Sort Continues to Grow—Comment On Current Affairs.

(By Ellis B. Usher.)
Milwaukee, Nov. 27.—The Wisconsin branch of the National Security League which was organized some months ago, has recently been getting itself into active working order, and has opened headquarters on the ground floor at No. 428 Milwaukee street, this city, and is prosecuting the work of securing members vigorously. The officers of the Wisconsin branch are August H. Vogel, president; Walter M. Spooner, secretary; Robert Camp, treasurer, and James C. Wall, executive secretary. National Joseph H. Choate, formerly American ambassador to the court of St. James, and Alton B. Parker, former Democratic candidate for president, are the honorary presidents of the organization. The Wisconsin list of vice presidents and members of the executive committee includes many prominent men of both political parties. The purpose of the league is to organize public sentiment in favor of better naval and military preparedness for the protection of the United States from foreign invasion, and for the stiffening of up at home and abroad, of respect for American efficiency in case of war. Gov. Philipp has appointed a committee of Wisconsin mayors, without political distinction, and both President Choate and the Governor have laid aside politics and called upon the people to back up President Wilson in his efforts to prepare this nation for defense. That is the spirit that the league is trying to instill in the minds of the people of the United States and it will respond to a patriotic call of such far-reaching importance. Today there is a large meeting of the members of the National Security League of the middle west, in Chicago, and this evening a large public meeting will be held. A delegation from Wisconsin is among those in attendance. Every patriotic American can heartily approve of our work for this organization, and every man owes it to his country to make his approval plain and in no uncertain manner.

Hustling Addresses German.
United States Senator Paul O. Husting delivered an address to his own townpeople, of Mayville, recently, that is to be commended for its American sentiments and for its patriotic support of the president and government of the United States. It is all the more commendable because of the fact that the senator is addressing an audience which was composed largely of people of German blood, the members of the local Gesangsverein, the singing society, were celebrating the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of their society. Referring to the unity of the German people, the senator drew a lesson that it is the emulation of Americans and concluded with the words of our country should be our first, our second, and our last consideration. "In but one respect would I question the sentimentality that name he refers to this country as still in its infancy. The fact that our national constitution is 128 years old does not measure the age of this nation. The Declaration of Independence is over 128 years old, and that was only the written declaration of a set of principles that had been lived 156 years in the hearts of the people. Hence there will be celebrated the 300th anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims, and the compact made on the Mayflower contained the essential elements of the constitution of the United States. More than that the stars and stripes emblazon the oldest national banner in the universe. Even the present official shape the American flag is nearly eight years old, having been ordained by Congress in 1818. The present national flag of England does not ante-date this flag by more than a few years. No country now engaged in the great war over seas has a banner that is as old as ours and that means that the present organization of all their governments has been made in our constitution was adopted. The United States are not so youthful that they need defer to other countries on that account. Our 'swaddling clothes' are men's arms."

Booker Washington's Death.
The recent death of Booker T. Washington has been recognized everywhere as a national loss. It certainly removes one of the remarkable men of the age. No one who has ever read his personal story, "Up From Slavery," could subsequently regard him as anything but an exceptional man. The book opens with a touching, pathetic tale of his youthful trip to Hampton Institute for his education. How on this first visit to Richmond he slept under a sidewalk with his humble little bag of personal belongings for a pillow. It closes with the statement that on the evening previous he had addressed a large assembly in the Virginia Statehouse, in this same city, and among his auditors were the governor and legislators and many of the leading men and women of Richmond. Meanwhile he had taken luncheon with Queen Victoria, had dined with the president of France, and had been received everywhere that he visited in Europe with most distinguished consideration. No white person can read the story of this struggle from under the handicap of slavery colored blood, and doubtful parentage, without thinking as he lays it aside that the white boy or man who can not do as well, or better, with his supreme advantage, should hang his head in shame and humiliation.

But Booker Washington was no sentimentalist. He was not a dreamer. He was never sloppy or maudlin in his talk to or about the negro, as a friend of mine who knew him, and had felt the driving impulse that he put into everything and everybody, when he was on the ground. "He was more a great captain of industry in his methods than a philanthropist." He believed his work worth doing and he did it with all his power, which was unusual and well directed.

Interview With Roosevelt.
I once enjoyed an interesting opportunity to study Booker Washington and Theodore Roosevelt. For an hour I was the third person during an interview in the cabinet room at the White House. Roosevelt was going over the field of southern appointments and asking Booker Washington's advice about local situations, about men, especially colored men, and their suitability for federal appointments. Both showed great familiarity with the field and both were, apparently, in perfect harmony and sincerity, endeavoring to do the best they could to secure proper public servants. Booker Washington, at the presence of the president of the United States unabashed, with no obsequiousness, and with entire dignity and self-command. When he spoke he went to the point in few words and with no air of speaking for a class or a favorite. He made no special pleas for the negro. He asked only that he be taken into the reckoning on his merits. When New Orleans was reached, Washington told the president that the Louisiana delegation in Congress was trying to drop the colored appointees there from $5,000 position down into a $2,500 place. At this the president called in Mr. Cortelyou and found it to be the fact, and I venture to say the colored man held his own. He pointed out to the colored man that when he became self-supporting, he will become self-respecting. That when he has attained to both these qualifications he has paved the way to be respected by his white countrymen and to hold a position of self a permanent and honorable position among men.

Export Sales Increase.
The factories and financiers of Wisconsin are doing a pretty good business in goods that are for export, just now. I asked a Milwaukee banker the other day how many of the Anglo-French bonds had been sold in this city and he told me he had sold $600,000 worth. It is probable that every bond seller in the state has sold some of them and that the aggregate is several times this sum. This loan is intended to finance our sales to the allies. It amounts to selling to them and taking their paper in payment. Inquiry of some of my acquaintances surprised me at the amount and variety of Wisconsin sales for export. The estimate was recently made that Wisconsin's share of the money that will be spent by the allies from the proceeds of their loan is to be $2,000,000 in but three directions, automobiles, leather and machinery. But this is only a start. I understand that there are small machine shops that are working every minute of the day, six days and Sundays, making lathes for export, and for use in eastern munition factories. Here is a partial list of Wisconsin exports that I have from reliable sources: Automobiles, auto trucks, motorcycles, wagons, harnesses, leather, knit goods, beds, machinery, shells, powder, grain and grain products, meat and provisions, condensed milk, cheese, macaroni, peas and beans. As a suggestion that these are not fanciful, I was told that 1300 carloads of cheese went abroad from this state in the spring months prior to July 1.

Eligibility Rules Condemned.
By an almost unanimous vote, undergraduates of the universities which make up the Western Intercollegiate Athletic Association have passed a resolution condemning the present eligibility rules governing the men who represent them. The current issue of the Outlook treats the matter editorially, saying that it is to be believed that this wholesale condemnation is a national. Nor is it. But the Outlook overlooks the point of the matter, it seems to me. The students are rebelling at two things; namely, the eleven year protest and the rule which prevents a man working his way through college by capitalizing his skill as an athlete. The first evil will be eradicated if the rule governing the second is changed. There should be no rule, according to the above mentioned resolution, that restrains a man from earning money by playing amateur ball. Perhaps it is not stated in so many words, but that is the idea.

The Close of Lake Traffic.
(Advertisement.)
Next Tuesday night at midnight the ball drops officially on Lake navigation for the season of 1915. Marine insurance ceases and any vessel left Monday for the east with 2800 tons, and the F. D. Underwood left Wednesday with 3,000 tons more, so with good weather at least one of these vessels may get back for another load, and with the other two vessels it looks as if the season's clean-up would be perfect. A notable fact about the big accumulation of freight, last Sunday, about 400 carloads, was that it was practically all Wisconsin business. This is a fine wind-up for the biggest season's Wisconsin business "lake and rail" that the Erie has ever known.

FRENCH TRENCH DIGGERS FIND VALUABLE ART PIECE.

(SPECIAL TO THIS GAZETTE)
Athens, Nov. 27.—A mutilated statue of Heros, discovered by French troops in the course of trench digging exercises on the island of Lemnos, may prove to be a find of great archaeological importance. The statue was uncovered on the site of the ancient town of Haephestia, which once boasted 60,000 inhabitants, and the condition of the statue is said to give conclusive evidence that the city was destroyed by a terrible earthquake and not by an invader, as had heretofore been thought likely.
